ABSTRACT

A base station for transmitting signals employing a CDMA technique comprises means for combining a plurality of spread spectrum data signals; means for measuring a characteristic of the output of the combining means for a given time period; and means for adaptively limiting an output of the combining means responsive, at least partially, to an output of the measuring means.